

the Government strongly urges should be for his entire life in order to properly protect the public and to facilitate the Defendant's own permanent rehabilitation.

V. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, the United States respectfully recommends that Defendant Aaron T. Daniels be sentenced to serve a term of imprisonment of 17 years, but in no event less than 15 years, followed by a lifetime period of supervised release. The government submits that this sentence is sufficient but not greater than necessary to satisfy the statutory purposes set forth in 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a).

Respectfully submitted,

BENJAMIN C. GLASSMAN
United States Attorney
