UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Respondent/Plaintiff,
v.
HAMID HAYAT,
Petitioner/Defendant.

No. 2:05-cr-240-GEB

ORDER

Petitioner and movant Hamid Hayat ("Hayat") moves for habeas corpus relief under 28 U.S.C. § 2255, arguing his convictions and sentence should be vacated because his attorney, Wazhma Mojaddidi, provided him with deficient representation in violation of his federal Sixth Amendment constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel. ECF No. 531 (Hayat's Motion). Specifically, Hayat contends in his motion that Mojaddidi failed to adequately investigate and present certain defenses on his behalf and to effectively represent him on certain issues during the trial.

The motion was referred to a United States Magistrate Judge for proposed findings and recommendations under a federal statute and a local rule. The federal statute under which the referral was made "makes it clear that the district judge must review the magistrate judge's findings and recommendations . . . if objection is made, but not otherwise." United States v. Reyna-Tapia, 328 F.3d 1114, 1121 (9th Cir. 2003).

1 The magistrate judge held habeas evidentiary hearings on the 2 motion. Habeas evidentiary hearings are usually required because 3 "[w]ithout [those] hearing[s], it is often difficult to 'reliably 4 determine whether [defense] counsel's investigation [of certain 5 defenses] was deficient [because] what was investigated, and the 6 scope of the investigation can rarely be discerned from the trial 7 record.'" Williams v. Trammell, 782 F.3d 1184, 1218 (10th Cir.
8 2015) (quoting Fairchild v. Workman, 579 F.3d 1134, 1142 (10th 9 Cir. 2009)). Further, typically it cannot be "determine[d] from 10 the bare trial record whether [defense] counsel's choice of 11 [trial strategy] was the result of [an] [objectively reasonable] 12 strategic decision." Fairchild, 579 F.3d at 1142.

13 The magistrate judge filed proposed Findings and 14 Recommendations ("F&Rs"), finding that Mojaddidi failed to 15 adequately investigate certain defenses on Hayat's behalf and to 16 effectively represent him on certain issues during trial. ECF 17 No. 734 ("F&Rs"). The United States ("United States" or 18 "government") filed objections to certain findings on April 6, 19 2019, ECF No. 744 ("Objs."), and Hayat filed a reply to those 20 objections on May 4, 2019. ECF No. 747 ("Reply").

21 The F&Rs include credibility determinations of fact 22 witnesses who testified before the magistrate judge during habeas 23 evidentiary hearings. "A district [judge] may not . . . reject a 24 magistrate judge's proposed credibility determination [concerning 25 fact witnesses the magistrate judge observed testify] without 26 hearing and seeing the testimony of the relevant witnesses."
27 Johnson v. Finn, 665 F.3d 1063, 1074 (9th Cir. 2011).

28 The F&Rs also include legal conclusions premised on legal

1 opinions of attorney expert witnesses who testified during the 2 habeas evidentiary hearings and opined on certain ineffective 3 assistance of counsel claims. Legal conclusions are reviewed 4 under the de novo review standard. "De novo review means that 5 the reviewing court 'does not defer to the lower court's ruling 6 but freely considers the matter anew, as if no decision had been 7 rendered below.'" Dawson v. Marshall, 561 F.3d 930, 933 (9th 8 Cir. 2009) (brackets omitted) (quoting United States v.
9 Silverman, 861 F.2d 571, 576 (9th Cir. 1988)). A district judge 10 has discretionary authority to rely on attorney expert testimony 11 on the ineffective assistance of counsel legal standards, and may 12 exercise that discretion by rejecting a magistrate judge's 13 findings which are premised on attorney expert legal opinions, 14 since "the district judge is himself . . . qualified to 15 understand the legal analysis required" when determining whether 16 counsel's representation of Hayat was ineffective representation.
17 Bonin v. Calderon, 59 F.3d 815, 838 (9th Cir. 1995). cf.
18 LaGrand v. Stewart, 133 F.3d 1253, 1270 (9th Cir. 1998) (stating 19 no authority was found supporting petitioner's "contention that 20 only outside expert testimony can provide a basis on which to 21 measure counsel's performance.") Findings based on attorney 22 expert legal testimony are rejected.

23 The overview of facts and issues concerning the motion are 24 stated in the direct appeal decision issued in United States v.
25 Hayat, 710 F.3d 875, 880-84 (9th Cir. 2013), as follows:

26 Hamid Hayat is a U.S. citizen of Pakistani 27 descent. He lived in the United States until 28 he was seven and then, between the ages of seven and eighteen, with his grandparents in Pakistan. Hayat returned to the United

1 States in 2000 to live with his parents in 2 Lodi, California. Three years later, in 3 April 2003, he traveled to Pakistan with his 4 family. He spent just over two years in 5 Pakistan on this second stay, returning to 6 the United States in late May 2005. Days
7 after his return, Hayat was arrested by FBI
8 agents and charged with providing material 9 support to terrorists and making false 10 statements to government officials. The 11 events giving rise to Hayat's arrest are as 12 follows:

13 In October 2001, FBI agents in Oregon
14 interviewed Naseem Khan, a 28-year-old 15 Pakistani immigrant, in connection with a 16 money laundering investigation. Khan 17 informed the agents that he had regularly 18 observed Ayman al Zawahiri, Osama bin Laden's 19 second-in-command and one of the FBI's 22 20 most-wanted terrorists, at a mosque in Lodi, 21 California, in 1999. Khan later told the 22 agents that he had also seen two other 23 individuals on the FBI's 22 most-wanted list 24 in Lodi during the same period.

25 The FBI then hired Khan as a 26 confidential informant and asked him to 27 return to Lodi to gather additional 28 information on a suspected terrorist cell.
Khan agreed. He began his work as an informant in Lodi in December 2001.
Approximately eight months later, in August 2002, Khan met Hayat, who was nineteen years old at the time and living in his parents' garage. As explained in greater detail below, recorded conversations between Khan and Hayat indicated that Hayat's father was linked to a terrorist organization in Pakistan and that Hayat's uncle and grandfather were recruiters for "jihad."

29 Between August 2002 and October 2003
30 Khan and Hayat spoke regularly. Khan 31 recorded seven of these conversations, took 32 notes on others, and reported to the FBI soon 33 after every conversation with Hayat, 34 summarizing for the agents those 35 conversations that were not recorded. The 36 recorded conversations were introduced at 37 trial, as was testimony by Khan regarding 38 unrecorded conversations. Because Khan and Hayat frequently spoke to each other in Pashto and Urdu, the jurors were provided with English translations of the pertinent

1 parts of the recorded conversations.

2 In the recorded conversations, Hayat
3 made several anti-American and anti-Semitic 4 remarks. At one point, for example, he 5 expressed pleasure over the murder of Wall 6 Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl because 7 his death meant that "[n]ow they can't send 8 one Jewish person to Pakistan." In addition, 9 Hayat at times spoke approvingly of Islamic 10 fundamentalist groups such as Jaish-e-11 Mohammed and indicated his respect for their 12 leaders. He also professed to know and to 13 admire Pakistanis who had engaged in "jihad." 14 Some of these people Hayat knew because they 15 had studied in a madrassah, or religious 16 school, in Pakistan run by his grandfather, 17 which Hayat had also attended. Hayat told 18 Khan that his grandfather was a prominent 19 cleric and that after 9/11, Pakistani 20 President Musharraf had sent him and others 21 to Afghanistan to persuade the Taliban to 22 hand over Osama bin Laden. Hayat also 23 described to Khan a terrorist training camp 24 in Pakistan—he said he had seen a video of 25 it—and, on a few occasions, expressed 26 interest in attending such a camp.

27 Five of the recorded conversations took 28 place while Hayat and Khan were both in Lodi.
29 At one point, when the two were discussing 30 travel to Pakistan and a possible meeting 31 with Hayat's uncle, Hayat said "I have one 32 objective now. If I went to Pakistan, now, 33 see, straight away, I'll stay at home for one 34 or two weeks, then I'm going for training, 35 friend." (Underlined portion spoken in 36 English).

37 Hayat traveled with his family to 38 Pakistan in April 2003. Two of the recorded 39 conversations took place when he was there.
40 Like the earlier conversations, they covered 41 a wide range of topics. On one occasion, 42 Khan scolded Hayat for being lazy and not 43 going to a training camp. In response, Hayat 44 protested that the camp was closed during hot 45 weather and that had the camp been open, he 46 "would have been there." On another 47 occasion, Khan relayed to Hayat a 48 conversation in which Hayat's father 49 explained that "[Hayat will] enter the 50 Madrassah, and, God Willing, he [will] go for 51 training!" Hayat responded to Khan: "Um-52 hmm. . . . No problem, absolutely."

1 (Underlined portion spoken in English).

2 In another of the recorded 3 conversations, Hayat explained to Khan how to 4 send money to Sipah-e-Sahaba ("SSP"), a 5 Pakistani organization that Pakistan declared 6 a terrorist organization in 2002. During a 7 conversation with Khan, Hayat expressed 8 admiration for members of SSP who die as 9 "martyrs." Hayat boasted that he gave more 10 money to SSP than any other member of his 11 Pakistani madrassah, and stated that he gave 12 money to SSP because his money was more 13 likely to be used to acquire "weapons, books 14 and everything" than if he gave to other 15 groups, which wasted money. (Underlined 16 portion spoken in English). Hayat also 17 reported that when someone told him that he 18 could go to jail for giving SSP money, he 19 replied, "Fuck you. Who cares, man, who goes 20 to jail, man? . . . . Fuck, look what's 21 America doing. . . ." (Underlined portion 22 spoken in English).

23 Hayat made several statements to Khan 24 indicating Hayat's knowledge of his family's 25 involvement in terrorist activities. For 26 example, Hayat explained that his father in 27 Lodi had sent money to SSP. Hayat also told 28 Khan that his grandfather, who was the leader of the madrassah Hayat attended in Pakistan, had called a special meeting in 1999 where he recommended that his students leave the madrassah to go participate in jihad. In addition, Hayat explained that if someone were interested in attending a training camp, that person could contact Hayat's maternal uncle, who would either accompany that person "to the Jihad people's office," or make a phone call to that office on the interested person's behalf.

29 Hayat's direct interactions with 30 American law enforcement began when he 31 attempted to reenter the United States in May 32 2005. On May 30, 2005, Hayat's return flight 33 to San Francisco was diverted to Japan 34 because Hayat's name appeared on the federal 35 government's "No Fly" list. Hayat was 36 interviewed in Japan by FBI agent Lawrence 37 Futa. Futa questioned Hayat about his two-38 year stay in Pakistan, including whether Hayat had joined a terrorist organization or attended a terrorist training camp. Hayat denied joining a terrorist group or attending

1 a training camp while in Pakistan. Futa 2 concluded that Hayat "posed [no] immediate 3 threat" and could be permitted to return to 4 the United States. Hayat left Japan and flew 5 to San Francisco that same evening.

6 Four days later, on June 3, 2005, FBI
7 agents Tenoch Aguilar and Sean Wells 8 interviewed Hayat at his parents' home in 9 Lodi. After again explaining the reason for 10 his family's trip to Pakistan—because of his 11 mother's health—and his activities while in 12 Pakistan, Hayat again denied having attended 13 a terrorist training camp and stated that "he 14 would never be involved with anything related 15 to terrorism, and didn't know why anybody 16 would say otherwise." After eliciting this 17 response, Aguilar and Wells asked Hayat to 18 come to the FBI office in Sacramento for 19 further questioning.

20 Hayat arrived at the FBI office in 21 Sacramento around 11 a.m. the following 22 morning and was interviewed in four waves.
23 Hayat at first denied having attended a 24 terrorist training camp, but during the 25 second session admitted that he had attended 26 a camp for a few days during an earlier stay 27 in Pakistan in 2000, where he "observed and 28 heard weapons training," and also in 2003, when he himself received "pistol training" at a camp in "Balakot."

The third and fourth sessions, which were videotaped, took place during the afternoon and evening of June 4, 2005, and the early morning hours of June 5. During the third interview, Hayat confirmed that he had attended a camp to train for jihad and said he was trained to use a pistol and rifle and taught how to kill American troops.

Before the final session, Hayat was given Miranda warnings (for the second time that day) and signed an Advice of Rights form (also for the second time). Hayat reported that at the training camp, he was told to expect to receive orders in the United States. When someone wanted to transmit orders to him, the person would first contact Adil Khan (a prominent Islamic figure in the Lodi, California area); Khan would contact Shabbir Ahmed (the Imam at Hayat's Lodi mosque); and Shabbir would contact Hayat.
Also, by the end of the interview Hayat had

1 suggested that his grandfather was involved 2 in jihadist activities, indicating that his 3 grandfather may have held a leadership
4 position in the terrorist camp Hayat 5 attended.

6 The FBI arrested Hayat at the end of 7 this set of interviews.

8 On January 26, 2006, the government 9 filed a second superseding indictment against 10 Hayat, charging him with one count of 11 violating 18 U.S.C. § 2339A (providing 12 material support to terrorists) and three 13 counts of violating 18 U.S.C. § 1001 (making 14 false statements to the FBI). Section 2339A 15 reads, in relevant part,

18 19 20 21
22
23 24
25 26 27
28 Whoever provides material support or resources or conceals or disguises the nature, location, source, or ownership of material support or resources, knowing or intending that they are to be used in preparation for, or in carrying out, a violation of [various provisions prescribing penalties for terrorist acts] . . . shall be . . . imprisoned not more than 15 years. . . .

18 U.S.C. § 2339A(a). The statute defines "material support or resources" as "any property, tangible or intangible, or service, including currency or monetary instruments or financial securities, financial services, lodging, training, expert advice or assistance, safehouses, false documentation or identification, communications equipment, facilities, weapons, lethal substances, explosives, personnel (1 or more individuals who may be or include oneself), and transportation, except medicine or religious materials." Id. § 2339A(b)(1). The prosecution's case was that Hayat had provided his personal services to a terrorist organization by attending the training camps in Pakistan and returning with the intent to carry out acts of terrorism when directed to do so. The three counts of making false statements to the FBI were related to Hayat's initial statements to various FBI agents in California, in which he denied attending a terrorist training camp while in Pakistan.

1 Hayat's trial began on February 14, 2 2006. In addition to the seven recorded 3 conversations between Hayat and Khan, the 4 government presented Khan's testimony about 5 those conversations and Hayat's confessions 6 to the FBI. The jury viewed the videotaped 7 confessions, and several agents, including 8 Futa, Aguilar, and Sweeney, testified about 9 their interviews with Hayat. The government 10 also introduced a "scrapbook" that agents had 11 seized from Hayat's parents' garage, where 12 Hayat was living. The scrapbook bore Hayat's 13 name on the cover and contained clippings 14 from Pakistani newspapers. Several of the 15 articles in the scrapbook discussed Islamic 16 fundamentalist groups, including the Taliban, 17 and their leaders, including Osama bin Laden.
18 Khan testified that Hayat had shown him the 19 scrapbook while expressing support for the 20 fundamentalist groups described in the 21 articles.

12 The government's evidence also included
13 a note written in Arabic that government 14 agents had found in Hayat's wallet after his 15 return from Pakistan. Khaleel Mohammed, an 16 expert in Islamic studies who testified as an 17 expert witness for the government, testified 18 that the note was an Islamic supplication.
19 He provided the following translation of the 20 Arabic phrase: "Oh Allah we place you at 21 their throats and we seek refuge in you from 22 their evils." Mohammed opined that the 23 supplication was both uncommon and "not 24 peaceful," and that the type of person who 25 would carry such a supplication was "[a] 26 person who perceives him or herself as being 27 engaged in war for God against an enemy."

21 Finally, the government presented 22 testimony from two additional experts, Hassan 23 Abbas and Eric Benn. Abbas, an expert on 24 extremist groups, testified to the location 25 and nature of typical terrorist training 26 camps in Pakistan. Benn, a satellite imagery 27 expert who had analyzed satellite images to 28 determine the likelihood that there was a militant training camp near Balakot between 2003 and 2005, characterized the likelihood as "a good strong possible." He further testified that when an analysis of the satellite imagery was combined with the description Hayat had provided in his confession about his travel to the camp, his assessment of the likelihood that a military

1 training camp existed outside Balakot 2 increased to "probable."

3 Hayat did not testify. He presented an 4 expert, Anita Weiss, who testified that it is 5 common for Pakistanis to carry a talismanic 6 prayer, known as a ta'wiz, for protection 7 while traveling. The district court did not 8 permit Ms. Weiss to express her opinion on 9 whether the note found in Hayat's wallet was 10 a ta'wiz because Weiss does not speak or read 11 Arabic.

12 Hayat also presented testimony from 13 eleven other witnesses—mostly FBI agents—and 14 from Naseem Khan, who had also testified for 15 the prosecution. One aspect of Hayat's 16 defense was that Khan was an unreliable 17 informant who had given the FBI implausible 18 information—namely a report that three Al 19 Qaeda members on the FBI's most wanted list 20 had visited a mosque in Lodi—the accuracy of 21 which the FBI was unable to confirm, and 22 which was belied by testimony from a regular 23 attendee of the Lodi mosque who never saw the 24 men. Hayat's counsel also elicited testimony 25 from Gary Schaaf, one of the agents who 26 interviewed Hayat, that Schaaf and other 27 agents used leading questions and that Hayat 28 seemed tired during the interview. In addition, agent Terry Rankhorn testified that he had posed undercover as a convert to Islam and met with Hayat four times in 2002; Hayat never mentioned training camps to Rankhorn.<sup>1</sup>

1 The magistrate judge supplemented the facts, finding: "Rankhorn also testified that he felt Hayat's talk was often 'more boasting than actual substance.'" F&Rs at 8:28. The referenced "boasting" phrase was in Rankhorn's response to Mojaddidi's examination question concerning Hayat's uncle in Pakistan. March 30, 2006 RT ("RT" refers to the trial transcript) at 3423:17-25;3424:1-12. The trial testimony concerning this boasting phrase follows:

22 Q. Do you recall Hamid telling you that his - I'm sorry-- his uncle was 23 the King of Pakistan and that he could get cigars for you?

24 A. I don't recall him saying he was the King. I recall him saying he 25 was a politician, an influential politician. And the conversation 26 involved around he was getting some particularly hard to get cigarettes 27 for Mr. Naseem Khan, and he had mentioned something to the effect of, 28 oh, I can get lots of things.

Q. Did you believe him when he said that?

A. At the time I didn't personally believe he could. It seemed to me to be more boasting than actual fact.

1 Jury deliberations began on April 12, 2 2005. On April 25, 2005, after nine days of 3 deliberation, the jury returned a verdict of 4 guilty on all four counts charged in the 5 indictment.

6 (alterations in original) (footnotes omitted).

7 The government's objections to the Magistrate Judge's findings
8 and recommendations

9 The government objects to the following findings: that 10 Mojaddidi failed to adequately investigate whether Hayat had a 11 viable alibi defense and to present that defense during trial; 12 that Mojaddidi failed to adequately search for a false 13 confessions expert; that Mojaddidi failed to adequately search 14 for an Arabic language expert witness to counter the government's 15 expert witness's testimony on the meaning of the supplication 16 Hayat had in his wallet, failed to object to a portion of that 17 expert's testimony as prohibited opinion testimony barred by 18 Federal Evidence Rule 704(b), and failed to adequately counter 19 the government's rebuttal closing argument on the probative value 20 of that expert's testimony; that Mojaddidi and co-defendant's 21 attorney Johnny Griffin jointly represented Hayat under a 22 conflict of interest which adversely affected Hayat's defense; 23 and "any finding" that Mojaddidi was ineffective because she

24 Q. Did Hamid seem to boast about other things in your conversations with 25 him?

26 A. His air was such that -- of course, this was only my opinion at the 27 time, that it was more -- yes, more boasting than actual substance.

28 RT 3423:17-25, 3424:1-8.

The magistrate judge also opines in a finding: "The taped conversations Hayat had with Naseem Khan showed a young man somewhat enamored of Pakistani terrorist leaders, hoping to impress the older Khan, and easily lead [sic] into a promise that he would attend such a camp when he reached Pakistan." F&Rs at 52:10-13. This conclusory finding is rejected.

1 failed to obtain a security clearance or to find counsel with a 2 security clearance. Objs. at 19 n.17, 24:20-25, 25:1, 98:11, 3 114:2-12, 119:8, 125:25-28, 127:20-22, 130:9-12, 140:9-11, 4 143:16-18, 176:24-25.

5 The government argues these findings should be rejected 6 because the magistrate judge misapplied the "legal standard 7 governing habeas review, including that court's erroneous refusal 8 to give deference to trial counsel's decisions because of her 9 inexperience." Id. at 1:21-23. Hayat rejoins:

10 The outcome of the proceedings below . . .
11 turned on the facts, which [the magistrate 12 judge] determined based largely on her 13 assessment of the testimony from multiple 14 witnesses at the 2018 [habeas] evidentiary 15 hearing over which [the magistrate judge] 16 presided. Chief among those witnesses was 17 Wazhma Mojaddidi, Hamid Hayat's trial 18 counsel.

19 At the [habeas] hearing . . ., the 20 magistrate heard and carefully weighed 21 attorney Mojaddidi's explanation of her trial 22 representation of Hamid . . . . Based on all 23 of the evidence before [the magistrate 24 judge], including testimony from key experts, 25 the magistrate found as fact that Mojaddidi's 26 ignorance of the law and errors in fact and 27 in logic led her to make "strategic" 28 decisions that were uninformed and unreasonable, constituting deficient performance.

Reply at 1:10-19 (footnote omitted).

23 The magistrate judge finds Mojaddidi's testimony at the 24 habeas evidentiary hearing "showed that she relied on Griffin, 25 [counsel for Hamid Hayat's father and co-defendant Umer Hayat,] 26 to such an extent that they were jointly representing Hamid 27 [Hayat]." F&Rs at 107:15-16. The magistrate judge also finds 28 Mojaddidi "understood that she was not competent to represent

1 Hayat without mentorship from another attorney. [Mojaddidi] 2 testified that she undertook representation of Hamid because she 3 understood that she 'would rely on [Griffin] in [her] 4 representation of Hamid' . . . . And, she relied on his advice 5 and her own research." Id. at 107:16-24 (some alterations in 6 original) (internal citation omitted).

7 The magistrate judge finds the "best evidence" of the joint 8 representation was "the decision that a rush-to-trial strategy 9 was in the best interests of both defendants. Mojaddidi simply 10 followed Griffin's decisions that were in the best interests of 11 his client, not hers." Id. at 106:6-8. The magistrate judge 12 "recognize[d] a joint defense agreement in which one defendant's 13 attorney takes a lead role can be perfectly acceptable," id. at 14 109:9-10, but finds in this case it became unacceptable "when the 15 first superseding indictment charged Hayat with material support 16 for terrorism, [because at that time] the basic defense strategy 17 [of rushing to trial caused] the representation of Hamid to come 18 into conflict with Griffin's strategy for the representation of 19 Umer [Hayat]," id. at 105:20-22. The magistrate judge finds this 20 conflict of interest "caused Hamid [Hayat]'s defense to forego 21 many viable litigation strategies," and that "this adverse effect 22 should result in a presumption [that Hamid Hayat's defense was] 23 prejudice[d]" under the United States Supreme Court's presumed 24 prejudice rule. Id. at 111:9, 13-14.

25 What the magistrate judge observed during the habeas 26 evidentiary proceeding concerning Mojaddidi's deficiencies in her 27 representation of Hayat differs from what the district judge 28 observed about Mojaddidi's representation of Hayat during the

1 trial proceedings. Cf. Bean v. Calderon, 163 F.3d 1073, 1081
2 (9th Cir. 1998) (indicating that the evidence developed at a 3 habeas evidentiary hearing concerning counsel's performance may 4 differ from evidence of how counsel represented defendant during 5 the jury trial proceedings; stating the evidence presented "at 6 the federal habeas hearing was far different from [what was 7 observed about counsel's representation of defendant during the] 8 jury [trial proceedings]"). During trial proceedings, Mojaddidi 9 appeared to independently and ably represent Hayat, and that 10 representation did not appear tainted by a conflict of interest.

11 Neither defense counsel informed the trial judge that 12 conflicts existed in this case. Defense counsel did inform the 13 trial judge that "in certain areas [they had] a common, joint 14 defense."<sup>2</sup> "[W]e generally presume that the lawyer is fully

16 <sup>2</sup> During a hearing on February 3, 2006, Mr. Griffin informed the district 17 judge:

18 [R]ecognizing there are going to be two juries, and basically two 19 cases being done in one, Ms. Mojaddidi will represent Mr. Hamid 20 Hayat and I'll be representing Mr. Umer Hayat, we - in certain 21 areas we have a common, joint defense. . . . [I]t's our 22 intention, with the Court's permission of course, to continue to 23 assist each other even though, for example, say, my jury is not 24 in the courtroom.

25 That assist does not mean that I'm going to examine 26 witnesses on behalf of Mr. Hamid Hayat, but that I would be able 27 to sit at counsel table, be present in the courtroom during that 28 portion where, frankly, it doesn't involve Umer Hayat, and vice versa, when my jury, as I'm referring to it, is in the courtroom, that Ms. Mojaddidi will be able to sit at counsel table and provide me assistance in terms of various matters, but she will not, for example, object, examine any witnesses, but that she would be in the courtroom at counsel table providing me assistance.

RT 60:17-25, 61:1-9.

Further, during the proceeding on February 14, 2006, Mr. Griffin stated:

The defense jointly has retained Mark Reichel, private attorney from Sacramento, to provide consultation to the defense jointly. It is not anticipated at this point that he would examine any witnesses. He may very well assist in the preparing briefs and motions if various issues come up during the course of the trial.

If, however, we determine that we want him to play a role

1 conscious of the overarching duty of complete loyalty to his or 2 her client. Trial courts appropriately and 'necessarily rely in 3 large measure upon the good faith and good judgment of defense 4 counsel.'" Burger v. Kemp, 483 U.S. 776, 784 (1987) (quoting 5 Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335, 347 (1980)).

6 [T]he rule applied when the trial judge [was] 7 not aware of [an asserted] conflict (and thus 8 not obligated to inquire) is that prejudice 9 [resulting from counsel's representation of a 10 defendant] will be presumed only if [a shown] 11 conflict has significantly affected counsel's 12 performance—thereby rendering the verdict 13 unreliable, even though . . . prejudice [from 14 counsel's representation under the Strickland 15 standard] cannot be shown.

16 Mickens v. Taylor, 535 U.S. 162, 172-73 (2002).

17 However, the Ninth Circuit states in United States v.
18 Walter-Eze, 869 F.3d 891, 906 (9th Cir. 2017), cert. denied, 19 139 S.Ct. 1196 (2019), that the United States Supreme Court's 20 "reasoning regarding when prejudice should be presumed does not 21 control," when vindication of a petitioner's Sixth Amendment 22 right to counsel can be resolved under Strickland's familiar 23 performance-and-prejudice framework, explaining:

24 As the Supreme Court clarified in 25 Mickens, the presumed prejudice rule was not 26 intended "to enforce the Canons of Legal 27 Ethics, but to apply needed prophylaxis in 28 situations where Strickland itself is evidently inadequate to assure vindication of the defendant's Sixth Amendment right to counsel." It follows that where a case is sufficiently straightforward such that it can of the Court, request to substitute in as either co-counsel or association of counsel either for me or Ms. Mojaddidi. He will not step in as attorney of record for both of us because each defendant has separate counsel.

6 analyzed under Strickland's performance-and-prejudice framework.

7 Ineffective Assistance of Counsel Claims

8 Under Strickland . . . an ineffective 9 assistance of counsel claim has two 10 components. First, the defendant must show 11 that counsel's performance was deficient.
12 This requires showing that counsel's 13 representation fell below an objective 14 standard of reasonableness. There is a 15 strong presumption that counsel's conduct 16 falls within the wide range of reasonable 17 professional assistance. Second, the 18 defendant must show that the deficient 19 performance prejudiced the defense. This 20 requires showing that counsel's errors were 21 so serious as to deprive the defendant of a 22 fair trial, a trial whose result is reliable.

23 Stanley v. Cullen, 633 F.3d 852, 862 (9th Cir. 2011) (internal 24 quotations and citations omitted).

25 The magistrate judge finds Mojaddidi committed several 26 errors, and that Mojaddidi's failure to adequately investigate 27 whether alibi witnesses existed who knew of Hayat's whereabouts 28 during the time he was charged with attending a terrorist training camp and to present that defense during the trial is singularly prejudicial.

29 Failure to investigate potential alibi witnesses and to present 30 an alibi defense

31 The government objects to the alibi defense findings, 32 arguing Mojaddidi "exercised her own independent judgment . . .
33 to pursue an alternative defense strategy over an alibi defense, 34 based on the totality of facts known to her and based on her

1 belief that it would be in the best interests of Hayat." Objs.
2 at 54:24-26. Hayat rejoins that the magistrate judge considered 3 "Mojaddidi's testimony concerning her justifications for failing 4 to conduct [an adequate investigation of the viability of an 5 alibi defense and] deemed all of them unreasonable, resting as 6 they did on errors of fact, law, and/or logic." Reply at 12:25-7 26, 13:1.

8 The magistrate judge finds Mojaddidi's failure to adequately 9 investigate the viability of an alibi defense was objectively 10 unreasonable, explaining:

11 The evidence adduced at the evidentiary 12 hearing showed that Mojaddidi initially 13 considered an alibi defense. (IV TR 732.)
14 She testified that in her discussions with 15 Hayat, she learned that he spent his time in 16 Pakistan in either Behboodi or Rawalpindi.
17 (Id. at 726-27.) He told her he spent time 18 playing cricket, playing video games, and 19 hanging out in front of the local store in 20 Behboodi. (Id. at 727.) She knew that he 21 spent time with family members and that there 22 were others in Pakistan who could testify to 23 his whereabouts. (Id.)

24 . . . .

25 . . . Despite knowing that there were 26 others in Pakistan who could provide 27 information on Hayat's whereabouts, Mojaddidi 28 testified that she did not conduct, or have an investigator conduct, interviews of witnesses in Pakistan. (Id. at 781.)

In her declaration in support of Hayat's motion for a new trial, Mojaddidi stated that she was also aware that [Hayat's cousin], Jaber Ismail, "had spent a substantial amount of time with Hamid in Pakistan." (ECF No.
441-2 at 2.) However, because Jaber was in Pakistan at the time of trial, Mojaddidi stated that she "knew [she] would be unable to serve him with a subpoena to testify at Hamid's trial." (Id.) At the evidentiary hearing, Mojaddidi testified that she did not interview Jaber. (IV TR 738.)

1 Mojaddidi summarized her investigation
2 into a possible alibi defense as follows: "I 3 spoke with his mother, his uncle, I reviewed 4 the [FBI interview reports in the] 302s, and 5 one of his cousins was a person that I did 6 consider, and ultimately decided not to use 7 him." (IV TR 737.)

8 . . . . .

9 Mojaddidi testified that she did not 10 consider many potential alibi witnesses as 11 viable because they did not see Hayat every 12 day. For example, she did not believe the 13 Pakistanis that Hayat played cricket with on 14 a regular basis were viable witnesses because 15 Hayat did not tell her that he played cricket 16 every day. . . .

17 . . . . .

18 . . . . . When asked whether she considered 19 Hayat's statement that he had attended a 20 [terrorist training] camp for three to six 21 months, Mojaddidi testified that she did not 22 "know why I would pursue something that I 23 knew my client told me wasn't true." (Id. at 24 782.) However, Mojaddidi was aware that 25 Hayat's confession, which referred to 26 attending a camp for "months," provided the 27 basis for the government's case. (Id. at 28 743.)

Mojaddidi testified that she was unaware that Rule 15 [of the Rules of Criminal Procedure] permitted her to seek to take the depositions of foreign witnesses in lieu of in-court testimony. (IV TR 737.) . . .
Mojaddidi also testified that Rule 15 was not relevant because she had rejected an alibi defense on the basis of a lack of "viable" witnesses. However, that testimony is belied by other evidence.

First, Mojaddidi believed that the only legitimate alibi witnesses were witnesses who saw Hayat every day. Yet, the indictment charged Hayat with attending a terrorist training camp for a "period of months," and the only evidence adduced at trial regarding Hayat's attendance at a training camp was that he had done so for somewhere between three and six months. Thus, Mojaddidi was

1 not required to account for Hayat's 2 whereabouts every day in Pakistan over the 3 two years he was there. Rather, an alibi
4 defense needed to show that Hayat was seen 5 during every continuous three-month period 6 between October 2003 and November 2004, the 7 dates identified in the indictment. Further,
8 Mojaddidi's uncertainty about the frequency 9 with which witnesses in Pakistan saw Hayat 10 provided "no reasonable basis" to decide not 11 to investigate. See Duncan [v. Ornoski], 528 12 F.3d [1222,] 1235 [(9th Cir. 2008)] (defense 13 counsel's "mere" belief that certain 14 testimony "might not be helpful" provided no 15 basis to decide not to investigate it 16 further); Ramonez v. Berghuis, 490 F.3d 482, 17 489 (6th Cir. 2007) (a decision to forego 18 investigation into witnesses based on a 19 "guess" about what those witnesses might say 20 is not reasonable); Rios v. Rocha, 299 F.3d 21 796, 806 (9th Cir. 2002) (an unreasonable 22 assumption is not a basis for a reasonable 23 strategic decision); Lord v. Wood, 184 F.3d 24 1083, 1095 (9th Cir. 1999) (counsel's "vague 25 impression" that witnesses were not credible 26 insufficient to excuse his failure to 27 interview them).

15 Second, Mojaddidi was unaware of Rule 15 16 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure. "An 17 attorney's ignorance of a point of law that 18 is fundamental to [her client's] case 19 combined with [her client's] failure to 20 perform basic research on that point is a 21 quintessential example of unreasonable 22 performance under Strickland." Hinton v.
23 Alabama, 571 U.S. 263, 274 (2014). While 24 Mojaddidi may have had good reason to reject 25 [certain individuals that the government 26 considered to have been involved with 27 terrorism] as potential witnesses, she did 28 not have any such basis to reject others in Pakistan. Because she felt she had no way to obtain their testimony, Mojaddidi failed to conduct an investigation into the possible testimony of other Pakistani witnesses. As a result, Mojaddidi failed to make informed decisions about an alibi defense.

This court also notes that the evidence in the record is sparse about just what sort of investigation Mojaddidi conducted. She appeared to recall only talking with Hayat

1 and his mother for a "list" of potential 2 alibi witnesses. She did not recall talking 3 with his other family members but stated that 4 she believed she did so. She did not testify
5 about just what she asked Hayat's family 6 members regarding possible alibi witnesses.
7 Did she ask Hayat and his family members 8 appropriately probing questions to identify 9 friends and family members in Pakistan? Or, 10 as the evidence before this court indicates, 11 did she make little attempt to investigate 12 witnesses in Pakistan because she did not 13 feel she could obtain their testimony?

14 Mojaddidi's misconceptions caused her to 15 make "strategic" decisions that were wholly 16 uninformed. Mojaddidi's determination that 17 witnesses were not viable was based on an 18 error in logic. She did not understand that 19 an alibi witness did not have to have been 20 with Hayat every day. Her determination was 21 further based on an unreasonable lack of 22 knowledge of criminal law because she was 23 unaware of Rule 15. For these reasons, 24 Mojaddidi's decision that the witnesses were 25 not viable was not a reasonable basis for her 26 tactical decision to forego further 27 investigation into alibi witnesses and to 28 give up on an alibi defense. See Thomas v. Chappell, 678 F.3d 1086, 1104 (9th Cir. 2012) (counsel's decision not to call a witness can only be considered tactical if he had "sufficient information with which to make an informed decision"); Avery v. Prelesnik, 548 F.3d 434, 437 (6th Cir. 2008) (Counsel cannot make a strategic decision not to have alibi witnesses testify when "he had no idea what they would have said.") Moreover, Mojaddidi's conduct, without considering her "strategy," was objectively unreasonable. A reasonably competent attorney would have done more to investigate Hayat's alibi.

29 Finally, it is worth noting that an 30 alibi defense was not at odds with challenges 31 to the government's evidence. Mojaddidi 32 could very well have initiated investigations 33 in Pakistan early on and then determined 34 whether the witnesses would be able to appear 35 in the United States or whether she would 36 need to move for Rule 15 depositions. She 37 had months to do so. Showing that Hayat 38 could not have been at a jihadi training camp 39 for the "period of months" specified in the 40 indictment would have been completely

1 consistent with the defense that Hayat's 2 confession should not be credited and the 3 government lacked other supporting evidence.
4 F&Rs at 24:20-25, 26:7-19, 27:2-5, 14-23, 28:19-22, 29:1-21, 5 32:18-25, 33:1-20 (some alterations in original) (footnote 6 omitted).

7 These factual findings are adopted. "A lawyer has a duty to 8 investigate what information . . . potential [alibi]-witnesses 9 possess, even if [she] later decides not to put them on the 10 stand." Sanders v. Ratelle, 21 F.3d 1446, 1457 (9th Cir. 1994) 11 (internal quotations and original alterations omitted). "While 12 it is strongly presumed that [defense] counsel made all 13 significant decisions in the exercise of reasonable professional 14 judgment, . . . counsel cannot be said to have [exercised 15 reasonable professional judgment] without first procuring the 16 information necessary to make such a decision." Williams v.
17 Filson, 908 F.3d 546, 567 (9th Cir. 2018) (internal quotations 18 and citation omitted).

19 Failure to procure and present a false confession expert

20 The United States also objects to the magistrate judge's 21 following findings that Mojaddidi was ineffective because she did 22 not procure a false confession expert:

23 The evidence before the [magistrate judge]
24 makes clear that Mojaddidi did not seriously 25 consider using a false confessions expert.
26 Rather, she and Griffin, from the beginning, 27 decided that [former FBI special agent James] 28 Wedick would testify about: (1) the interrogation techniques used and, (2) why those techniques can render a confession unreliable. The problem is that Wedick did not have the expertise to testify to that second, and most important, point. As noted by the district [judge in a ruling on the government's motion to exclude Wedick's

1 proposed testimony], Wedick had no background
2 in psychology or other expertise to talk 3 about the effect of the interrogation 4 techniques on a suspect.

5 F&Rs at 60:1-7.

6 The United States argues:

7 Mojaddidi reviewed all of Hayat's FBI 8 interviews and believed that the most 9 important evidence against him was his 10 confession. (W.M. Depo. 49:5-14, 68:16-18, 11 162:18-19, 207:6-11; Tr. 743:2-4). Ms.
12 Mojaddidi was familiar with methods to 13 challenge purported false confessions, had 14 "learned about" the law governing 15 voluntariness of a confession, and had 16 discussed it with Mr. Griffin and James 17 Wedick, a former FBI special agent with 35
18 years of experience, who was an investigator 19 for [Hamid] Hayat and Umer [Hayat] before and 20 through their 2006 trials. (W.M. Depo. 41:9-21 14, 70:4-16; Tr. 574:14-610:22, 583:6-11, 22 744:2-15). Ms. Mojaddidi originally intended 23 to challenge Hayat's confession with a 24 defense expert on false confessions and 25 cross-examination of his government
26 interrogators. (W.M. Depo. 207:12-209:17). .
27 . . Ms. Mojaddidi "certainly" knew a 28 challenge to the "voluntariness" of a confession was a legal basis for a motion to suppress. (Tr. 744:18-20).

The defense intended to call Wedick as an expert to explain why Hayat's confession was unreliable. (W.M. Depo. 70:9-16; Tr.
594:6-9). As an FBI agent, Wedick had conducted hundreds of interviews and interrogations, and agreed to serve as an expert to offer an opinion on the techniques used to elicit Hayat's confession, among other things. (W.M. Depo. 207:16-208:4; Tr.
575:12, 604:6-21, 724:9-25; Gov. Sup. Ans.
Ex. 18). Ms. Mojaddidi was aware Wedick had never previously qualified as an expert in the field of false confessions but she believed he would be "good" and would be deemed qualified to testify. (W.M. Depo.
70:21-23, 71:5-7, 208:16-17, 286:4-6). Ms.
Mojaddidi was aware there were other potential false confession experts, and considered information sent to her by other experts in the field but did not contact

1 them. (Id. at 70:24-71:7, 208:7-17).
2 Ultimately, she decided to utilize Wedick as 3 an expert on behalf of Hayat. (W.M. Depo.
4 208:18-209:1; Tr. 594:6-9).

The United States further argues: "Mojaddidi reasonably believed that Wedick's experience in conducting FBI interrogations would be sufficient to establish his qualifications to offer an expert opinion concerning the defense theory of Hayat's purportedly unreliable confession." Id. at 113:1-3. Mojaddidi disclosed Wedick in her Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure disclosure statement, explaining:

Wedick would testify, among other things, that "the FBI Sacramento office had the capability to videotape Hamid Hayat's interview right when it actually started"; that "the interviewing agents did not consider but should have considered [Hayat's] vulnerabilities as an interviewee"; and that the agents "all used leading questions during the interviews of Hamid Hayat."

Hayat, 710 F.3d at 903 (alteration in original).

The United States moved for an order excluding Wedick's proposed testimony, and the motion was granted. F&Rs at 57:11-25, 58:1-7.

The district [judge] excluded Wedick's testimony in its entirety, finding that much of the testimony was of "marginal probative value" and that its value was outweighed by the risk of confusing the jury, wasting time, and presenting needless cumulative evidence. The [district judge] also concluded that Wedick's testimony "would not assist the trier of fact."

Hayat, 710 F.3d at 903.

Hayat has not shown that Mojaddidi was objectively

1 unreasonable in her belief that Wedick could be qualified to 2 testify as a false confession expert. Further, during trial, 3 Mojaddidi "thoroughly explored the conduct of the [FBI] agents 4 who participated in Hayat's interview, including the improper use 5 of leading questions, during her cross-examination of those 6 agents." Id. Therefore, the magistrate judge's finding that 7 Mojaddidi's failure to procure a different false confession 8 expert constituted deficient representation is rejected.

9 Failure to procure and present an Arabic language defense expert 10 on the meaning of the supplication

11 The United States objects to the finding that Mojaddidi 12 failed to adequately search for an Arabic language expert to 13 counter the government's Arabic language expert's testimony on 14 the supplication Hayat carried in his wallet. Objs. at 132:18-15 23, 133:1-21. The United States argues: "Mojaddidi could not 16 obtain an Arabic-speaking expert to opine on the correctness of 17 Dr. Mohammed's translation and focused instead on effectively 18 cross-examining him." Id. at 128:24-25.

19 Hayat replies:

20 [the magistrate judge noted] the sparseness 21 of the record regarding Mojaddidi's efforts 22 at locating an Arabic language expert - 23 Mojaddidi provided no details in her 24 testimony nor supporting documentation as to 25 those efforts - the magistrate stated that "without knowing who those people were it is not possible to determine whether any would have qualified as an expert or what their testimony could have been." (F&R at 86.)

26 Reply at 36:6-10.

27 The magistrate judge finds:

28 Mojaddidi testified at her deposition

1 that she attempted to find an Arabic language 2 expert who could testify about the meaning of 3 the supplication. (Mojaddidi Depo. at 199 4 (ECF No. 548 at 239).) Mojaddidi further 5 testified that [defense expert Anita Weiss]
6 provided some names and Mojaddidi contacted 7 people . . . who might be able to provide 8 that testimony. (Id.) However, [Mojaddidi]
9 was "unsuccessful." (Id.) Mojaddidi 10 estimated that she contacted "at least ten" 11 people to testify regarding the supplication.
12 (Id. at 200.) She was unable to identify any 13 of the people she contacted.

8 F&Rs at 86:5-11.

9 The magistrate judge also finds:

10 The record is sparse about Mojaddidi's 11 conduct in attempting to locate an Arabic 12 language expert to testify about the 13 supplication. While she testified that she 14 contacted "at least ten people," without 15 knowing who those people were it is not 16 possible to determine whether any would have 17 qualified as an expert or what their 18 testimony could have been. . . .

15 Hayat provides an article from the 16 Atlantic Monthly, published in October 2006, 17 shortly after trial. The author contacted 18 Professor Bernard Haykel, who had testified 19 for the defense in a 2003 terrorism trial in 20 Detroit; Ingrid Mattson, a professor of 21 Islamic Studies at Hartford Seminary; and 22 Salman Masood, a Pakistani journalist in 23 Islamabad. (EH Ex. ZZ at 90-91.) Each of 24 these people was familiar with the 25 supplication and told the author it is 26 "common." The fact that the article's author 27 found three people who knew the supplication, 28 two of whom who were scholars and potential experts, shows that there were experts available. Haykel testified in the present case that he was available in March 2006 and, if asked, would have testified at Hayat's trial.

25 F&Rs at 86:14-28, 87:1-2.

26 The information Mojaddidi provided during the habeas 27 proceeding on her efforts to find an Arabic language 28 supplication expert fails to evince that when she discontinued

1 her search, that information "would [have led] a reasonable 2 attorney to [conclude there was no need to search] further."
3 Wiggins v. Smith, 539 U.S. 510, 527 (2003). "Strickland demands 4 that such decisions be reasonable and informed." Jennings v.
5 Woodford, 290 F.3d 1006, 1014 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Strickland, 6 466 U.S. at 691). Therefore, the magistrate judge's findings on 7 this issue are adopted.

8 Failure to object to Dr. Mohammed's testimony under Rule 704(b)

9 The United States objects to the finding that Mojaddidi
10 should have challenged Dr. Mohammed's testimony as impermissible 11 opinion on Hayat's state of mind under Rule 704(b), because the 12 "legal precedent 'raised serious questions' about this issue."
13 F&Rs at 83:20-22. The United States argues this conclusion 14 "conflicts with the Ninth Circuit's holding in Hayat, 710 F.3d at 15 901-02 that, under established precedent, Dr. Mohammed's 16 testimony was proper under Rule 704(b)." Objs. at 124:14-15.
17 Hayat rejoins the government is wrong because "a ruling that the 18 admission of evidence did not constitute plain error does not 19 mean that evidence should have and would have been admitted over 20 a proper objection." Reply at 34:5-7.

21 Hayat has not shown that Mojaddidi's failure to object to 22 this testimony was constitutionally deficient representation:

23 Under [Ninth Circuit] precedent, Rule 704(b) 24 does not bar testimony supporting an 25 inference or conclusion that a defendant does 26 or does not have the requisite mental state, 27 so long as the expert does not draw the 28 ultimate inference or conclusion for the jury and the ultimate inference or conclusion does not necessarily follow from the testimony. . . .

1 . . . . Mohammed testified about the kind 2 of person who would carry a note such as the 3 one found in Hayat's wallet, but he never 4 commented directly on Hayat's mental state.

5 Hayat, 710 F.3d at 901-02 (internal quotations and citations 6 omitted).

7 The magistrate judge's finding is rejected because Hayat has 8 not shown Mojaddidi's failure to object fell below the objective 9 standard of reasonableness.

10 Other Objections

11 The government objects to "any finding that Ms. Mojaddidi's 12 failure to seek a security clearance was deficient." Objs. at 19 13 n.17. The United States argues this finding should be reversed 14 "because it is unnecessary to dispose of Hayat's claim and, more 15 importantly, establishes a rule, contrary to law, that defense 16 counsel in a case possibly involving classified information is 17 per se ineffective for failing to seek and obtain an unnecessary 18 security clearance." Id. This conclusory legal finding is 19 rejected.

20 The government also objects to the admission of Tahir 21 Anwar's affidavit and testimony during the habeas proceeding, 22 arguing this evidence "was inadmissible because he was not a 23 percipient witness and therefore could not offer a lay opinion on 24 facts he did not perceive." Objs. at 131 n.92. The magistrate 25 judge finds Anwar's testimony was admissible as percipient 26 witness evidence under Evidence Rule 701, and has probative value 27 on the deficiency representation finding that Mojaddidi should 28 not have aborted her search for an Arabic language expert on the meaning of the supplication Hayat possessed when she did. F&Rs

1 at 90:24-27, 91:1-5. The admissible portion of the challenged 2 lay witness evidence has minimal probative value on the 3 deficiency finding that Mojaddidi should have procured an Arabic 4 speaking expert witness on the meaning of the supplication to 5 more effectively counter the prosecution's expert witness's 6 testimony on this issue.

7 The government also objects to the magistrate judge's 8 findings that Mojaddidi was ineffective when she failed to object 9 to the government's rebuttal closing argument on the probative 10 value of Dr. Mohammed's testimony and by her failure to respond 11 to the government's characterization of Dr. Mohammed's testimony 12 in her closing argument. Objs. at 140:9-11.

13 Mojaddidi gave her closing argument before the government 14 gave a rebuttal closing argument, so she was not authorized to 15 make additional closing argument. Standard procedure in criminal 16 cases in which the government must prove each element of a crime 17 beyond a reasonable doubt prescribes that the government gives 18 its opening closing argument, followed by the defense closing 19 argument, and then the government gives a rebuttal closing 20 argument. Further, abstaining from objecting during closing 21 argument is a common choice: "Because many lawyers refrain from 22 objecting during . . . closing argument, absent egregious 23 misstatements, the failure to object during closing argument is 24 within the 'wide range' of permissible professional legal 25 conduct." United States v. Necochea, 986 F.2d 1273, 1281 (9th 26 Cir. 1993) (citing Strickland, 466 U.S. at 689), as amended on 27 denial of reh'g (Apr. 15, 1993).

28 In addition, Mojaddidi appears to have anticipated and

1 adequately addressed the subject portion of the government's 2 rebuttal closing argument when she gave her closing argument, and 3 her closing argument has not been shown to be an objectively 4 unreasonable argument. See RT 4322:2-25, 4323:1-25, 4324:1-2 5 (April 12, 2006).<sup>3</sup> Further, the trial judge explained to the 6 jury in the jury instructions that closing arguments are not 7 evidence, and if the facts as jurors remember them differ from 8 the way the lawyers state them, each juror's memory of them 9 controls.

10
11 <sup>3</sup> The relevant portion of Mojaddidi's closing argument follows:

12 The government's expert, Dr. Mohammed, testified that it was a 13 prayer carried by a warrior. Dr. Mohammed admitted on the stand 14 that his views were controversial amongst Muslim scholars. . . .

15 Dr. Mohammed has never been to Pakistan and he doesn't 16 understand the culture. In fact, he had to send e-mail asking 17 former students of his, who are not scholars, what the 18 significance of carrying such a prayer was in Pakistan. He 19 didn't know himself. And he ultimately based his opinion about 20 that prayer on a person he's never met in Uzbekistan, and on a 21 man who no longer works for an Egyptian university because of his 22 radical views.

23 . . . He essentially called random people who he knew would 24 agree with him.

25 And he catered his testimony to draw one conclusion. Even 26 when I asked him about the two major sources that he relied upon, 27 and I pointed out that one of those sources had this prayer in 28 the Book of Traveling, he attempted to put that in the context of 29 jihad. He had one goal. That was the conclusion he wanted to 30 draw, and he was going to draw it however he had to.

31 He also gave a literal translation, and admitted that 32 literal translations can often change the meaning of the words.

33 See, the problem with Dr. Mohammed's testimony about that 34 prayer is that he has no idea of the cultural context of carrying 35 such a prayer in Pakistan. He can't possibly because he just 36 doesn't know about Pakistani culture.

37 Dr. Anita Weiss, however, is an expert on Pakistani 38 culture. You heard her tell you that carrying prayers in Arabic 39 is a very common practice in Pakistan, especially by travelers 40 for safety reasons. The government either doesn't understand the 41 cultural significance of carrying a ta'wiz or it didn't want you 42 to know about it. Because had they asked their other expert, Mr.
43 Abbas, who knows about Pakistani culture, he would have told them 44 that Dr. Mohammed's conclusions were wrong, and that prayers like 45 those are commonly carried by travelers and not warriors. So Dr.
46 Mohammed's testimony itself was problematic. And the existence 47 of that prayer in Hamid's wallet doesn't prove that he went to a 48 terrorist training camp.

1 Therefore, these findings are rejected.

2 Prejudice

3 Since Hayat has shown his counsel's representation was 4 deficient on two issues, the remaining question is whether 5 Hayat's defense was prejudiced by counsel's errors. Hayat "is 6 deemed to have suffered 'prejudice' as the result of [counsel's] 7 performance if he succeeds in demonstrating that 'there is a 8 reasonable probability that, but for counsel's errors, the result 9 of the proceeding would have been different.'" Bonin, 59 F.3d at 10 833 (quoting Wade v. Calderon, 29 F.3d 1312, 1323 (9th Cir.
11 1994), overruled on other grounds by Rohan ex rel. Gates v.
12 Woodford, 334 F.3d 803, 815 (9th Cir. 2003)).

13 To determine prejudice, the court "must compare the evidence 14 that actually was presented to the jury with that which could 15 have been presented had counsel acted appropriately." Cannedy v.
16 Adams, 706 F.3d 1148, 1163 (9th Cir. 2013) (quoting Thomas, 17 678 F.3d at 1102), as amended on denial of reh'g, 733 F.3d 794 18 (9th Cir. 2013). The court then decides whether "a reasonable 19 probability" exists that a juror "hearing the additional evidence 20 developed in the postconviction [habeas] proceedings," would have 21 made a different decision. Williams v. Taylor , 529 U.S. 362, 22 396-97 (2000). "Some errors will have had a pervasive effect on 23 the inferences to be drawn from the evidence, altering the entire 24 evidentiary picture, and some will have had an isolated, trivial 25 effect." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 695-96.

26 Prejudice from failure to investigate potential alibi witnesses

27 Hayat's habeas counsel presented six alibi witnesses at the 28 habeas evidentiary hearing. F&Rs at 11:28. These witnesses

1 could have testified at trial if Mojaddidi had adequately 2 investigated a potential alibi defense and presented that defense 3 during trial. The magistrate judge finds all six alibi witnesses
4 sufficiently credible, explaining that notwithstanding Hayat's 5 confession that he attended a training camp for three to six 6 months, the witnesses' testimony "directly contradicted" the 7 confession, their "testimony was consistent," and demonstrated 8 that "the longest period of time Hayat was absent from his 9 family's village in Behboodi was one week." F&Rs at 47:5-10.

10 The magistrate judge explains:

11 [the six witnesses] accumulated 12 testimony . . . show[s] that Hayat was not 13 absent from Behboodi or Rawalpindi for any 14 consecutive three-month period. The court 15 has no problem accepting the fact that family 16 members and good friends, who typically saw 17 Hayat on a daily or weekly basis when he was 18 in Pakistan at that time, would have 19 remembered such an extended absence. Their 20 memories did not need to be perfect about the 21 events of those two years to have that 22 recollection.

23 Further, the witnesses corroborated each 24 other on some important points during the 25 relevant time period of Fall 2003 to Fall 26 2004. Raheela[, Hayat's sister,] and Jaber[, 27 Hayat's cousin,] recalled that when Hayat's 28 family first arrived in Pakistan, they spent a short period of time in Rawalpindi before moving to Behboodi where they resided during their stay. (I TR 131-32; II TR 308.) Raheela and Rafaqat[, Hayat's friend,] recalled that Hayat's trips to Rawalpindi with his family for his mother's medical treatments occurred once or twice a month.
(I TR 136-37; VI TR 962.) Several witnesses recalled that besides the trips to Rawalpindi, which sometimes included Islamabad, Hayat only took two trips, both to Multan and neither of which exceeded a week.
(I TR 138-40 (Raheela); II TR 314-15 (Jaber); VI TR 935-36 (Anas); VI TR 960 (Rafaqat).)

The lynchpin of the government's case

1 against Hayat was Hayat's confession.
2 Without it, the government could not have 3 proven Hayat took any act in material support 4 of terrorism. The alibi witness testimony 5 would have undermined jurors' reliance on 6 Hayat's confession.

7 F&Rs at 51:18-28, 52:1-6 (footnote omitted).

8 The magistrate judge's factual determinations concerning the 9 testifying alibi witnesses are adopted.

10 Prejudice from failure to call a defense Arabic language expert 11 witness on the supplication

12 Hayat's habeas counsel also presented Dr. Bernard Haykel, a 13 professor of Near Eastern Studies at Princeton University, who 14 testified as an expert on the Arabic language, Islamic culture, 15 and Islamic political movements, and gave his expert opinion on 16 the supplication found in Hayat's wallet. F&Rs at 88:12-28, 17 89:1-10. The magistrate judge finds Haykel's testimony "clear 18 and unequivocal - the supplication Hayat carried was commonly 19 used by many Muslims, not just by jihadis." F&Rs at 90:18-19.

20 Haykel defined a "supplication" as an 21 invocation or prayer to God. [(IV TR 634.)] 22 In Arabic, such a supplication is called a 23 "du'a." (Id.) The source of this du'a is 24 the Hadith, a tradition of the Prophet 25 Muhammad. (Id.) This du'a is found in a 26 number of different collections of prophetic 27 traditions. (Id. at 636.) Haykel testified 28 that he was familiar with the supplication.
(Id. at 635) He had heard it used. (Id.)

29 Haykel testified that the literal 30 translation of the du'a is "Oh, God, we ask 31 you to be at the throats [of our enemies].
32 And we seek your help and assistance from 33 their evils or their misdeeds." (IV TR 638.)
34 The idiomatic translation provided by Haykel 35 is "Oh, God, we ask, or beseech, you to . . .
36 confront out enemies. And we ask you for 37 help from their evil deeds." (Id. at 639.)
38 Haykel explained that "tradition tells us

1 that [the Prophet] used [this du'a] at a time 2 when he was about to begin travel. . . . And 3 travel at the time in Arabia . . . was 4 fraught with danger." (Id.)

5 Haykel testified that this du'a is not 6 exclusive to any particular group. "All 7 Muslims use it." (IV TR 640.) He testified 8 that some invocations may call on God to help 9 defeat an enemy. (Id. at 642.) However, the 10 supplication Hayat carried was not an 11 "offensive invocation" like that. Rather, it 12 would be used when a Muslim is afraid that 13 someone might harm him. (Id.) Haykel has 14 heard the prayer used by religious leaders 15 leading midday Friday prayers. (Id. at 642-16 43.)

17 Haykel testified that an opinion that 18 anyone who carried or recited this 19 supplication would necessarily be involved in 20 violent jihadi behavior was unfounded. (IV 21 TR 644-45.) "[A]ll Muslims use this 22 supplication, not just jihadis." (Id. at 23 675.)

24 F&Rs at 88:19-28, 89:1-10 (some alterations in original) 25 (footnote omitted).

26 Haykel's expert opinion that the supplication is used by 27 many Muslims, "not just jihadis," supports Hayat's argument that 28 Mojaddidi's failure to present an Arabic language expert on the 29 meaning of the supplication during trial contributed to the 30 prejudice Hayat suffered.

31 Prejudice Analysis

32 The remaining issue is whether there is a "reasonable 33 probability" that Hayat's jury, or a juror, would have reached a 34 different decision had evidence been presented to the jury that 35 was not presented because of counsel's errors. Thomas, 678 F.3d 36 at 1105. "Prejudice is established if there is a reasonable 37 probability that at least one juror would have struck a different 38 balance . . . ." Hamilton v. Ayers, 583 F.3d 1100, 1131 (9th

1 Cir. 2009) (quoting Belmontes v. Ayers, 529 F.3d 834, 863 (9th 2 Cir. 2008), rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Wong v. Belmontes, 3 558 U.S. 15 (2009)). When considering this reasonable 4 probability issue, the court examines whether "objective clues" 5 exist "as to [a juror's] assessment of the case strongly 6 suggest[ing] that the case was close." Thomas, 678 F.3d at 1103.
7 Objective clues could include the length of jury deliberations, a 8 jury request for a readback of testimony, and a jury 9 communication evincing that the jury reached an impasse in its 10 deliberations.

11 "Longer jury deliberations weigh against a finding of 12 harmless error because lengthy deliberations suggest a difficult 13 case." United States v. Velarde-Gomez, 269 F.3d 1023, 1036 (9th 14 Cir. 2001) (en banc)(internal quotations omitted)(indicating 15 complexity of trial issues are considered when deciding this 16 factor by concluding "the four-day jury deliberations were 17 relatively lengthy for this two-count drug importation and 18 possession case."). "Further, [when] the jury asked for 19 readbacks of . . . testimony while it was deliberating," that 20 could evince "it evidently did not regard the case as an easy 21 one." United States v. Blueford, 312 F.3d 962, 976 (9th Cir.
22 2002).

23 Hayat's jury took nine days to render a verdict. ECF Nos.
24 311-28. The jury deliberated on April 12, 13, 14, 17, 19, 20, 25 21, 24, and 25, 2006. The trial transcript shows that on 26 Thursday April 13, 2006, there was discussion of the jury's 27 request for readback of the videotaped interviews of Hayat. RT 28 4558:16-4559:1-15. An order issued on Monday, April 17, 2006,

1 stating in pertinent part: "Last week, . . . the Hamid jury . . .
2 requested . . . the replay of certain videotapes. The replay 3 before the Hamid jury is scheduled to begin at 9:00 a.m. on 4 [Monday] April 17, 2006." Order, ECF No. 314. The docket
5 minutes show that on Tuesday, April 18, 2006, the video replay 6 was completed and the jury resumed deliberations and eventually 7 recessed until Wednesday, April 19, 2006, at 9:00 a.m. On 8 Wednesday, April 19, 2006, the docket minutes show another note 9 was received from the jury, dated April 19, 2006. The trial 10 transcript shows that the April 19, 2006 note concerned the 11 phrase material and/or resources in a jury instruction. RT 12 4656:5-25, 4675, 4693:8-25, 4694-4697:1-4. Further discussion 13 was held on this jury instruction issue on Thursday, April 20, 14 2006, and a supplemental jury instruction was given later that 15 day. RT 4706-4708:1-8. On Friday, April 21, 2006, the judge 16 received a jury note signed by the foreperson at 4:05 p.m., 17 stating: "There is impass [sic] with a juror who does not seem to 18 fully comprehend the deliberation process. I'm available to 19 discuss this with you and counsel at anytime [sic]." The note is 20 attached to an order filed April 26, 2006. ECF No. 326. The 21 judge responded with the following written communication: "Jury, 22 Please continue your deliberations." Id.

23 The trial transcript reveals that on Monday, April 24, 2006, 24 at 1:55 p.m., the jury requested in a note: "Testimony of Agent 25 Harry Sweeney of 6/4/05 interview with Hamid Hayat." RT 4782:4-26 4787:25 (April 24, 2006). This testimony covered Hayat's 27 confession. The judge responded to the jury in writing on April 28 24, 2006, at 2:40 p.m., stating: "I am considering your request

1 and estimate it could take until 4:30 p.m. or approximately 9:00
2 o'clock a.m. on Tuesday, [April 25, 2006,] before the court
3 reporter prepares that testimony." RT 4794:25, 4795:2-4 (April 4 24, 2006). The readback of agent Harry Sweeney's testimony of 5 the interview with Hamid Hayat occurred on Tuesday, April 25, 6 2006. After the readback on April 25, 2006, the jury returned a 7 guilty verdict on all four charged counts. ECF No. 328.

8 Even though the jury returned guilty verdicts after the 9 agent Sweeney interview with Hayat was read back to the jury, the 10 April 21, 2006 jury note evinces that one juror was clearly 11 struggling to reach a verdict on which other jurors agreed.
12 Therefore, "additional exculpatory evidence, [on Hayat's] alibi 13 defense [and testimony from an Arabic language expert on the 14 meaning of the supplication Hayat carried], had a strong 15 likelihood of tipping the scales [for that juror] in the other 16 direction." Foster v. Wolfenbarger, 687 F.3d 702, 710 (6th Cir.
17 2012). "And, because the jury was required to reach a unanimous 18 verdict on each count, the outcome could have differed if only 19 'one juror would have struck a different balance.'" Weeden v.
20 Johnson, 854 F.3d 1063, 1071 (9th Cir. 2017) (quoting Wiggins, 21 539 U.S. at 537).

22 Therefore, the F&Rs filed January 11, 2019, ECF No. 734, are 23 adopted in part and the movant's convictions and sentence are 24 vacated. Further, the Clerk of Court shall close the companion 25 case No. 14-cv-1073 and enter judgment for the movant.
