Identified during this conference were Israel, the United States, USSR, as well as the Governments of Iraq, Kuwait, and Saudi Arabia.

[redacted] noted that during the conference all attendees had to pledge allegiance to their Muslim faith and loyalty to the Government of Iran. [redacted] advised that the conference was primarily political in nature and propaganda was presented in the form of publications and a film which supported the MSA-PSG and the GOI. [redacted] advised that an example of the propaganda was a reel-to-reel movie in the Persian tongue shown attendees. The film as interpreted to [redacted] appeared to be a training film on terrorism and guerrilla warfare. [redacted] recalled one vivid scene from the film which depicted a household nurse trusted by a family targeted by a terrorist act wherein the nurse turned on the family after the terrorists had burst into the house shooting at the family. The nurse, when one member of the family attempted to call for help, pulled a weapon and stopped the call assisting the terrorists/hostage takers. The interpretation to source was that Muslims need to infiltrate, appear to be friends of a target, and be in a position to turn on the target. The film also demonstrated how Muslims should use terrorism to fight their enemies.
